Bridge Gamers

You may or may not know PewDiePie. The Swedish Youtuber became the most-subscribed user in 2013. His youtube channel is primarily focused on video game commentaries. At first he just played and commented famous games, later on he started playing and commenting less known games and helped them to reach popularity.

As a coincidence, we also have a Swedish commentator. Yesterday the 25-years-old World Champion Ola Rimstedt, together with the 22-years-old Italian star Giovanni Donati, entertained the spectators of the third round of the OCBL Open League with their live commentary (see pic).

The previous matches were commented by the also very young Adam Grossack, Signe Buus Thomsen, Christian Bakke, David Grainger and Jakub Wojcieszek.

Will these young twitchers help Bridge to increase its popularity, especially among the youngest? We strongly hope so!

The Information Game

by Mark Horton

One of the excellent things about the many competitions that are currently being staged on the Internet is the wealth of information that is provided, with details of bidding and play from every table being available within a few minutes of each round being completed.

This can be useful in many ways, for example so as to compare individual choices during the bidding. On the second deal of the match between Potter and Sleepless in Seattle West held this collection:

and saw partner open 3♡.

In my featured match of the OCBL Mixed League that was the end of the auction. Only Riva Salon raised to what proved to be the easy game, as partner held:

♠6 ♡10987543 ♢K97 ♣A2

and the missing trumps were 2-2

East led the ♢10 and declarer ruffed West's ace and played a club to the king followed by a club to the jack. East ruffed and exited with the ♢K, declarer ruffing and playing two rounds of hearts. East won with the king, cashed the queen (declarer pitching the ♠5) and seeing no danger exited with the ♢J allowing declarer to claim the rest,+420.

Eric Sieg

Is there any case for North to bid 4♣ rather than 4♡? As the cards lie 5♣ is very easy to make. Only one pair bid 5♣ - but South had opened 1♣ and West's heart lead should have been a killer. However, having won the first trick with the queen East switched to a trump and now needed declarer to go wrong in spades. Declarer did, but in the other room they were in 6♣ doubled which cost 300.

Declarer ruffed the diamond lead an played a low heart, East winning with the queen and returning the ♢K which declarer ruffed. After cashing the ♡A declarer played a spade to the king followed by two rounds of clubs, East pitching a diamond. A spade to the ten lost to the jack and West returned a spade, East winning with the ace, cashing the ♡K and exiting with a diamond, which added up to two down, -100 and 11 IMPs.

As it turns out East had found the only way to give declarer the contract - unlucky!

That proved to be the last significant swing, Potter winning 67-38.

Almost a Collection

by Mark Horton

Despite the deprivations of Lockdown it is still possible to enjoy major sporting contests. While typing this report I am listening to the penultimate day's play in the Test Match between Sri Lanka and England, which might have an exciting finish. As a young man my father would take me to Trent Bridge to watch Nottinghamshire and I recall that if a batsman scored a century a collection would be made among the spectators, a tradition that has long since died out. In a 20 board bridge match it is unusual for a team to score 100 IMPs, but not impossible. That sets the scene for the Round 3 encounter of the OCBL Open League between Palma and BridgeScanner.

East led the ♣4 and declarer won with the six and played the ♡Q, East taking the ace and exiting with the ♠5. Declarer won with dummy's ace, cashed his club winners and played a second spade, cashing dummy's king and queen. When the suit failed to break he exited with a spade and West won and switched to a diamond, East winning with the king and playing a heart to ensure another trick for the defence, three down, -500 and 14 IMPs.

That took Palma's total to 99 - but fate decreed they could not score the run they needed from the final delivery.
